NORFOLK

Two men were expected to recover after being stabbed last night during a fight in a neighborhood near Old Dominion University, police said.

The incident was reported at 11:23 p.m. on 42nd Street near Elkhorn Avenue.

Police spokesman Chris Amos said a man walking down the street kicked over a garbage can, which led to words with two other men from inside a house.

A confrontation occurred outside and the garbage can kicker left and returned with a knife. A fight ensued and the two men from the house were stabbed or cut, Amos said. They were taken to the hospital with non-life threatening injuries, he said.

A suspect was taken into custody but Amos did not have his identity this morning.

Several hundred young people in the area were holding parties and celebrating in the streets nearby last night.

The scene is one block from campus in a neighborhood mixed with students and permanent residents.
